

Windmill of Dosches

Finished in Spring 2007, the Moulin de Dosches was reconstructed using traditional techniques from the C18th. It dominates the village and is part of a project on the theme of how bread was made in the past. Open days are organised every month. Group visits are by reservation.

History of the windmill... in Dosches

Reconstruction of the mill was envisaged after reading a report by the Aube's Archives Office that found many windmills in the canton, examining the C18th Cassini map that shows 140 mills in the Aube with two of them in Dosches and finally studying different local almanacs and geography books that confirm the existence of one or more mills in the commune of Dosches of which the oldest dated to the C14th .

It was done with the aim of safeguarding the traditional skills of millers and the carpenters of the mill.

The story of the project

Locally-elected officials had to first be convinced about this ambitious project. Erwin Schriever was though determined to get the project started.

The adventure started thanks to Evelynne Perrot, mayor of Dosches who offered the land, and Dominique Voix, departmental councillor for canton

In 2001, the European Social Fund, the State , the regional council of Champagne-Ardenne, the departmental council of the Aube, the combined district council in Troyes and the Forêt d'Orient Regional Nature Park financed the reconstruction of the mill and the restauration of the barn.

In the last two years work has been carried out thanks to subsidies and sponsorship as well as by participating in participant projects, competitions.

2009 and 2010 :

- Financing by the regional council :

- * Dossier Initiatives Citoyennes et Solidaires pour l'égalité et la Jeunesse
- * Dossier adressé à la Direction de l'Aménagement du territoire
