How businesses can support our vital work

Corporate partnerships

We believe that by working together, we can better achieve our vision of a London alive with nature, where everyone can experience and enjoy wildlife

Make wildlife your business

We believe that that by working together, we can achieve more to help transform the capital's natural environment for people and wildlife to enjoy.

We want to build mutually rewarding partnerships with companies that share our values and desire to make a difference for London's wildlife and people.

Your organisation can work with us through:

- Our Investors in Wildlife scheme
- Becoming a corporate partner of the Trust

Our corporate partners can also access wild team-building days through our Wild Workdays programme.

Thank you to all our corporate supporters that have contributed time, effort and funding to advance our vision for a London alive with nature.

Case studies

Mace

Mace is a long-term partner of London Wildlife Trust and over the last six years more than 2,000 Mace employees have given their time to help nature conservation across London.

the public three years earlier than planned. In 2016, Mace efforts have been focused on Walthamstow Wetlands, where volunteers and specialist subcontractors are giving 370 days-worth of time to help create a new outdoor classroom, bird hide, floating nesting rafts for migratory birds, and habitat improvements for local wildlife.

Emma Roebuck, our Nature Reserve Manager at Walthamstow Wetlands, says: "Mace are building a SEND classroom and bird hide on site, managed by Mace project managers from concept to completion, enabling us to extend our engaging outdoor education curriculum to school children with special educational needs and disabilities – which is absolutely brilliant."

Isabel McAllister, Director of Sustainability at Mace, says: "Our long-term partnership with London Wildlife Trust has been rewarding and exciting for our staff. We recognise the need to open up the city's green spaces to communities – by restoring and improving wildlife habitat we are helping to create more wild areas that will bring education and wellbeing benefits to Londoners."

DLA Piper

Global law firm DLA Piper has been supporting London Wildlife Trust since 2012, with their experts providing pro bono legal support and advice on partnership contracts, major funding agreements, contracts with suppliers, real estate and employment among other areas.

DLA Piper employees have spent an amazing 838 hours supporting us since the start of our partnership – support which would otherwise have cost London Wildlife Trust £264,440.

Stas Kuzmierkiewicz, DLA Piper UK Pro Bono Manager, says: "DLA Piper is extremely proud to support The London Wildlife Trust. The provision of pro bono legal services allows the Trust to direct more of its funding to its extremely important programmatic work, and we look forward to continuing our collaboration."

Richard Grindle, London Wildlife Trust Chief Operating Officer, says: "DLA Piper's support has been invaluable to the Trust. The high-quality pro bono advice we have received from DLA Piper's excellent lawyers through our partnership has saved significant time and money which means we have been able to invest more resources into direct delivery."

The Green Well

Massage therapy company The Green Well has been supporting London Wildlife Trust since 2013, donating 5% of their net profits towards our work to protect London's wild spaces. The Green Well's wonderful long-term, unrestricted support means that we can spend these donations wherever they are most needed, and that people visiting their Therapy Rooms have the chance to find out about London Wildlife Trust and the nature reserves that are near them to enjoy.

Anna Glowacka, Co-Founder of The Green Well, says: "We're really proud of supporting the London Wildlife Trust. It's so important to contribute to the preservation and development of London's wild spaces, not only for the wildlife that lives within them but for the mental and physical well-being of each and every Londoner."

Rosie Oldham, London Wildlife Trust's Development Manager says: "The Green Well's values are a perfect fit with London Wildlife Trust's – we both believe in helping people to rejuvenate and improve their wellbeing. We really appreciate The Green Well's long-term support which means we can do more to enable people to access and enjoy nature."
