Training and skills

- Introduction
- Training: the basics
- How training can help the 50+ back into work
- Kinds of training
- Training: the practicalities
- Government employment support programmes
- Other support programmes

This section describes how training can help people aged over 50 get back to work by improving their skills and qualifications; the kinds of training most likely to be helpful; different learning styles; and importantly, offers suggestions on how to support your 50+ customers while they are training. In addition, it explains how to find relevant training, who provides it and who pays for it.

It also provides information on Government and other employment support programmes for the 50+ age group.
