Description:

Trademap.org is one of the trade data of United Nations. United Nations publishes data gathered from statistic institutions of countries on trademap.org. Import and export data of all countries are published and import capacities of countries are observed according to product and country.

Trademap is a platform that Total world trade volume, total import and export volume of countries, where countries import from and where and how much countries import what product, may be reported. At the same time, total foreign trade deficit and surplus of countries or trade deficit and surplus based on product may be reported. Trademap may be considered as the biggest data about foreign trade.
