Dont worry about that.

If you dont mind I would like to give you a suggestion:

Go to your Ex-boss, where you have done with your articles and work there till you get a good job.....

by this you can have some experience and if you wish you can enter into practise too..

if you are ideal right now, you may trouble in future because one of my senior went to an interview after 3 months of clearing CA and he faced a question "what were you doing in these 3 months?"

When we apply for articleship in different firms.....some firms select us and some reject.

So i guesss it's the same thing after becoming a CA. some companies will hire you and some won't.

This isn't surprising.

Hi CA AK Gupta,

Getting a job is not a problem nowadays, getting the right job is the problem. Let me share a trick which worked for most of my seniors who were qualified and got job recently.

Sit with your friend of similar who is in job who has good resume writing skills and draft a neat resume and upload in popular job sites, few to name it naukri, monster, timesjob.

And see the wonders in 2 days.

Dear Mr. Gupta and all those who feel the same,

I had a dream of becoming a CA , - which I still nurture in the heart of my hearts knowing fully well that it will remain --- a dream. For me it's very sad to see such plight of such a distinguished profession as CA. But don't lose heart. Your experience and the CA qualification will take you to heights of success sooner than later.

For the sake of all the hard work you all have put in, don't let your negative emotion win over the confidence in you. Because a single negative emotion may ruin all the positive aspects of your character. Think this way -

$(+1)(+1)(+1)(+1)(-1) = - 1$!!!!!

Try to face the interview board boldly and with self-esteem , as if you don't need the job and you are there just to check your ability to mingle with serious people!

You are CAs !!!! And you are experts in your fields. Waiting for the good news.

Regards
