I dont think a CA who has diligenlty completed his articleship will ever face a problem of job. Coz during my articleship o nly I was offered a lumpsum package but I didnt it accept as I wanted to have my degree first.This is my personal experi ence and I do not contradict anyone.

Secondly CA is all about being positive and innovative and not just about expecting someone to handover you some calculation task in return for a five digit salary. And suppose if there is a job deficiency we can become entrepreneurs with all the knowledge (not bookish but practical) we have, and do good. No doubt practice is also an option then.

CA is more than just a degree to fetch you a job in MNCs. Its a gateway of becoming a founder of one of them..

You can start your own practise yaar. Why are you worrying about job? Become an employer and hire assistants instead of being an assistant.

You should try for mid sized firm to get hands on core accounting, finance and taxation.. if you get a manufacturing company, it will get you to middle management in other companies after 1-2 years based on your grasping and other skills.

Never get disgussed.. Bigger companies are in recession this time due to their own policies... First you get a job than if you think so, start trying for better job...

Don't expect much from campus placement programme. Only those company comes to campus who have huge vacancies for CAs as ICAI is charging hefty amount for recruiting from campus. Why a company will come in campus to recruit one or two CAs by paying 5 Lakh to ICAI????
