To prepare for Chartered Financial Analyst (CFA), the two most important things are consistency and planning. First of all, learn everything about CFA and the three levels of examination. Then you check out the CFA Level 1 syllabus and create an index of things to need to study. Short term goals make long term success. Then create a plan of action (study time table in layman language) according to the CFA Level 1 course and stick to it from day one. However, executing a plan is always easier and efficient when you have professional guidance. It saves your time with all the hit and trial you face during your preparation. And trust me time is the key here if you plan to crack it in the first attempt. There are plenty of places you can enroll at and start preparing.

If you are looking for a place to pursue a preparation program, then EduPristine is a renowned name in the market. There are quite a few positive reviews about their CFA program in Mumbai, Delhi & Bengaluru. They have faculty members who are practitioners from the Industry which adds to your practical knowledge. You can give it a try.
