Dear Ramana, There's no degree requirement as such. If you are a graduate and carrying exposure in SAP FICO (whether user or consultant), you are good to go. However, to be able to appear for the certification, you should have 1 year implementation experience in SAP. The other way around is to get admission in SAP authorised education partners. They will give you classroom training and prepare you for certification. Only drawback is that this is a very costly work around. Hope this helps Cheers Sheli

I have just completed my B.com (Hons) & CA. IPCC and am pursuing my articleship(1st Year) with a firm that has clients using SAP, Oracle. I have worked on SAP & know its very basics relevant to an auditor. I would also mention that after completing my CA I would intend to work in Management field rather than the Auditing line. Thus I would request you to guide me whether it is good option to do my SAP FI certification from ICAI. Also if you could throw some light on some other certifications that could be viable with the finance field & IT. Another way that I look is that I start preparing for my MBA or would you recommend something else.

Regards,

Mayank

Hi Mayank

Good to hear from you. If you want to move into management profile rather than auditing then I would recommend you start preparing for MBA. Getting into SAP field will not solve the purpose since this is a rather technical field and you can enter managerial role only after 10 years of experience like any other technical profile.

However, yes SAP gives a consulting exposure wherein you are more exposed to different clients from different industries. The fact remains the same: end of the day you are a technical person. Last but not the least, you are the best person to decide your interest area.

Thanks

Sheli

Hi Ms. Sehrawat,

I have done B.E/ MBA(Finance) and also have a total work experience 4 years. Right now I am working as a finance executive (in a Manufacturing Company) and my job responsibilities are financial analysis, Costing, Profitability analysis, MIS, Budgeting and forecasting etc. As I am looking for a job change so is it important or necessary for me to have SAP FICO certification or training to get a break in companies using SAP, Oracle, Hyperion etc....
